I. R. C. Elects Ray Goodman President

Election of officers for the International Relations Club was held Wednesday, May 10. The following girls were elected to serve for the 1939-40 session: Raynell Goodman, to replace Elizabeth Alexander as President; Hilda Clarke to replace Glennis Powers as Vice President; Eunice Martin, succeeding Betty CLOPTON as Secretary; Margaret Ramsey replacing Arcelle Coulbourn as Treasurer, and Ann Smart, Reporter.

At present, plans are being made for the I. R. C. state convention to be held at Mary Washington College in October, 1939. At this time, representatives from International Relations Clubs from about twenty-five colleges and universities in Virginia will convene here for the week-end. On the program will be several prominent speakers from the State Department and the diplomatic corps in Washington. The theme for the meeting has not yet been selected.

Presiding at the conference will be Helen Heyl, who was elected President of the state convention at a meeting of the Virginia clubs at the Southeastern I. R. C. Convention, which met at William and Mary College during the past Easter. Also at this convention, Miss Raynell Goodman was elected Treasurer of the state organization.

This is the second time that the honor has come to Mary Washington College. The first state convention to be held here was in 1935, when Miss Olivia Wheeler presided at the meeting.

Home Ec. Club Has Full Schedule

The Home Economics Club of Mary Washington College has been working out a full schedule for the next few weeks. The club will gather Monday, May 15 for its major social event of the year, a party at the Farmers' Creamery. Entertainment will be furnished by the class in Foods Service, and refreshments will be supplied by the Creamery. It has been rumored that there is a surprise in store for those present.

"Oh no, we can't tell what it is yet," said Miss Henrietta Roberts, president of the Home Ec. Club, in reply to curious inquiries, "but I can tell you this much, it's going to be good."

On Thursday, May 18, the members will again gather. This time in the Tea Room at 7:00 in order to elect and install officers.

Commercial Club Plans Reorganization

Senior Day Wednesday

Next Wednesday has been set aside as Senior Day. All seniors will wear their caps and gowns throughout the day.

The entire class will assemble just before lunch. At dinner they will walk through the dining hall after which they will eat together.

The convocation program which is in charge of the senior class consists of a talk by Mary Burgess, a talk by Maude Rae Smith, and a one act comedy-mystery play written by Elizabeth Bodwell, and directed by Miriam Carpenter.

Jeanne Johnson, President of the class of '39 will introduce Betty CLOPTON, chairman of the program

Horse Show Scheduled For May 20

Plans for the annual Spring Horse Show to take place at Battleground Park on May 20th, have been completed.

Classes start at 10:30 and run through until 12:30. There will be an intermission until 1:30. Then the show runs on continuously until 6:00.

This horse show, which is to be the biggest and best presented here is under the supervision of Miss Constance Moore, riding instructor who has trained all classes. She is assisted by Kay Rucker, president of the Riding Club and other members.

The classes include: beginning, intermediate and advanced equitation groups and beginners, intermediate and advanced jumping classes. In addition there will be several novelty classes including the Doughnut Race, Musical Stalls, and Costume class. There will be the Achievement class and a Formation Ride composed of the winner of blue ribbons. The winner of that group will receive the Mary Washington College Trophy.

There are twenty-one classes in all. Three ribbons and one cup will be awarded in each class.

Buses will leave flag stone walk at 10:30, 11:30 and 1:30, fare 10c each way. Admission to the horse show is 15c for college girls; 25c for the general public.

Charlotte Hall In Charge Of Campaign

A complete reorganization campaign, of which Charlotte Hall is chairman, is being sponsored by the Commercial Club. Next year the club will have a new name, new method of receiving members, and certain standards to uphold in order to retain membership.

All this year's members maintaining a "C" average at the end current quarter will be made charter members of the new organization. Formal bids, according to announcement from Connie Mangus, president of the society, will be issued at the end of next term's fall quarter to all commercial students having an average of "C". This average must be upheld at all times by all members; anyone having more than one "D" will automatically be dropped from the club roll.

Next year's name for the club will be chosen by means of a contest, which all club members are eligible to enter. A somewhat unusual prize will be given the girl submitting the winning name: she will be allowed to choose any book she wants as her reward. A box in which to deposit all entries may be found in Monroe Hall, and all members are urged to participate.

Election of next year's officers will be held on May 18.

Relative to its many improvements, the Commercial Club will supply two pages of the 1939-40 Bayonet.

The club's annual picnic was held Wednesday. Two truck-loads of girls and numerous cars of faculty members went to Little Falls for what proved to be not only a feast, but a wading session, hiking party and community sing as well.

English Club Dance Monday Night

The Modern Portias, active English Club on the hill, under the sponsorship of Dr. George Earle Shankle, is giving a formal dance Monday evening, May fifteenth from nine o'clock until eleven o'clock on the roof garden. It is rumored that Roland Leveque, Mary Washington College's favorite orchestra, has been engaged to furnish music for the gala occasion.

The entire student body and faculty are invited because there's going to be music and fun for all.

Bunny Prunier again goes to Lovettsville. What's the attraction? Could it be L....?!

Jerry Walters is going home again this week-end. What's his name?

Parker Crutchfield came up Sunday and Monday nights to see Gretchen Bubenzer. Twice in one week.

Kay Kalsey made a hit at V. P. I. J. R. is coming up this week-end.

Iia Bishop's heart throb, Braxton Godwin, home town fellow, is coming up this week-end. Aren't you thrilled Iia?

Jean Hull palpitated all over the place Sunday due to Webster's visit.

Tommy Eubank of Hampton Sidney was up to see Bapple this week-end.

We are sorry that Mac McGavock has left us. Bon Voyage Mac.

Sally Phyllis how about that bid to U. of Md? Are you going to fill it?

Did Dot Adam's heart beat Saturday night. Hampton Sidney came up.

Margaret Sinclair has it bad. Aboo Morris was up Sunday to see her. Remember the hayride?

Six more days till heaven is what we hear Midge Clapp saying.

We have been told that Frances Grief rated a bid to Cornell Finals. Too bad you can't go up Fran. Sam Walker of Davidson College was up on the hill Tuesday evening to see that cute girl, Lucille Cutchin. These N. C. boys sure do travel.

Jay Field's Wen Thayer is to meet her in N. Y. in June and they are to journey to the World's Fair.

DID YOU KNOW?

Josephine Ewing is being called "Cuddles" now? What happened Sunday night?

Elise McGavok has left school since her sprained wrist kept her from typing? We are plenty sorry.

Jackie Edge invited "Randolph Macon's smoothest" to the May Day Dance but Jackie Copeland got the letter of regrets from him!

Connie Rollins—one of our former students plans to trip it to the altar soon.

Mary George and Anne, Emma and Jamie will suite together. Won't they have a time!

Sprinklers are for the grass and not the walks? (Some people don't).

Who threw that Coca-Cola bottle down the 3rd floor of Virginia at 11:15. It certainly did crash with a bang.

The freshmen are still griping over the fact that they (and their dates) are sent indoors when it turns dark. Oh unhappy day, crowded conditions.

Hannah Grahl had five dates (different ones) last week—all in a row?

Vernon Boyd has beaten Dick Irby's record—almost. Is Barbara serious about this?

After a blind date with Bobby, Kay Myers received a six page typewritten letter!!

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF?

Eleanor Small didn't throw pencils at Dr. Young?

Jo Peoples didn't get to go to dear ole Carolina once in a while?

Bid Bodwell ever stopped being so versatile?

Steve's Gordon didn't come this week-end?

Eugenia Clark quit writing Charlie every day?

Lucy Dickinson didn't get a good rush at any dance?

Ditto Jackie Edge?

Irene Bladell hadn't come back to see us?

"Gillum" Twins didn't look alike?

"Ducky" Burgess wasn't so sweet?

Nancy Moseley wasn't so cute 'n' friendly?

Dr. Vogelback wasn't a good dancer?

Everybody got a letter every mail delivery?

Jane Garnett didn't say something cute every time she opened her mouth.

Dr. Moss wasn't so popular?

"Bapple" got a "60"?

Donald Holden hadn't gotten it for house-president of Virginia Hall?

Elsie Mae Cornwell would make up her mind?

Win Leavitt couldn't dance?

Midge Clapp didn't get a bid somewhere every week-end?

Kay Meyers hadn't gotten all of her boy friends back?

Mr. Kirby quit smiling?

Adine Goodloe didn't look beautiful all the time?

"Grundy" Clark didn't get LAMBS and LAND mixed up?

"Willie" Rollins didn't go to the show every Tuesday nite?

Beverly Roberts didn't "fall" tomorrow?

In the spring a young man's fancy didn't turn?

Answers next week!

Margaret McCulloch believed her friends when they told her the English Club Dance was last Wednesday night. She dressed up, went to the roof garden and the gym—but couldn't find it.

May Day In Review

The bright sun shone down on the anxious crowd seated in the open air theatre. It was a delightful spring-like scene—bright colors, eager young voices anticipating the coming event. The entire scene was shaded by tall, majestic maples and birches. Everywhere the same thought was being expressed—"It's so glad it is so lovely out today."

Suddenly the trumpets were heard, one at the top of the Hill, the other near the amphitheatre announcing the opening of the festival. Happy parents straightened up, proud boy-friends got ready to observe their loved ones in their hour of triumph.

The procession started with the gaudy bearers sedately walking down the steps to align themselves two on either side of the throne. Next came the maids, twenty-four in all, marching down two at a time. Each carried a muf with spring flowers to match the loveliness of her dress. Never have such grandeur of colors been so successfully and charmingly combined as were then. The maid of honor, Miriam Carpenter, stately walked down to take her place at the right of the throne. She carried a bouquet of flowers. Following her was the crown bearer, and then the flower girls who dropped rose petals on the ground. At last the long awaited moment came—Aline Goodloe, the May Queen, serenely walked down, looking every inch a queen. She was a mixture of adorableness, and royalty appropriately adorned in white, carrying her sceptre.

After the crowning of the queen by her maid of honor, the queen welcomed the guests. The program, which was adapted from the Nutcracker Suite by Tschalkowsky, was beautifully performed by the various physical education classes. The college orchestra played throughout the dances, with the glee club accompanying with certain selections.

At nine o'clock, there was a dance on the roof garden for those who had participated in the May Day festivities. It was a grand close to a wonderful day.

Ah, me—over the campus still lingers the heavy breath of spring—onions.

Ruth Cheshire Class Prexy For Third Time

Recently elected senior class prexy is Ruth Cheshire from Oyster Bay, Long Island, New York. Twice before she has served in the capacity of class president, in her freshman and sophomore years, respectively. That record shows her excellent ability as a leader.

A glimpse into the more private life of next year's senior president reveals some interesting facts. Ruth is an ardent member of the "three musketeers." She is interested in everything and everybody and has that intangible facility of getting along with people. It would be entirely amiss at this point not to mention her love for "Ham."

An amusing incident occurred not long ago which has furnished Ruth's friends with many laughs since. It seems that our Long Island girl was visiting a friend in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. On the train down Ruth engaged in a very interesting conversation with a charming New York socialite. Ruth, at her very best made quite an impression and then as a grand finale they drew up to a little mountain station. There was no sign of life with the exception of an old horse and wagon containing two overalled youths. Ruth, with the aid of her friend, began looking around for someone who might have come to meet her. Just then the occupants of the wagon came toward her beaming with "Hello, all ready? Sis just sent us up to meet you, hop in."

Ann Beetles Elected

At the Alpha Tau Pi meeting last Tuesday night, May 2, Ann Beetles was elected the new president. The other officers will be elected at the next meeting, May 18. Ten girls invited to join the club will be pledged in about two weeks. A picnic for May 20 is being planned.

NOMINATION

Although 1940 is politically a long time away—many months in which anything can happen in the realm of those who bargain for votes and pork barrels—collegians have already started thinking about the Presidential campaign. First to come out into the open on the whole question is the Butler University Collegian, which proposes that Secretary of State Cordell Hull be the Democratic nominee for the next resident of the White House.

Why? Listen to this: "Mr. Hull is, we believe, the one man in the Democratic party today who could unite the conservative and liberal elements. He has supported the radical New Deal measures only mildly, and also has backed the conservative actions of the administration."

Will the Collegian's nominee come through? What do you think?

For Faculty Men Only

CLINTON, N. Y.—(ACP)—Men, if your hair is growing thin in places and baldness is approaching, you should eat more and better food to arrest the receding hair-line.

That is the assertion of Prof. Earl O. Butcher of the department of biology at Hamilton College who recently gained evidence for his statements in experiments completed on white rats Dr. Butcher proved that demands for energy and for body repair are first met before the hair receives its quota of nutrition.

Business and domestic worries; the common excuse given for falling hair, may cause the loss of appetite and in that way decrease the intake of food necessary to nurture the hair cells, Dr. Butcher says.

Dr. Butcher noted that white rats get a new growth of hair every thirty-five days. If the animals, however, are underfed, their bodies continue to grow in length, and they are as active as ever, but their hair growth occurs only every 50 or 60 days, if at all.

Undernourishment retards the hair growth through the endocrine glands. Just exactly how these glands allow the other necessities of the body to be satisfied at the expense of the hair is being further investigated. Another challenge to scientists is the extent that endocrine glands can be altered so that hair can be induced to grow.

"Less worry and better appetites, more rest and less energy-consuming activity should be the salvation of America's hair problem," Dr. Butcher declared.

DONALD HOLDEN

We all know Donald with her sparkling personality, winning smile, and that ever pleasing good-naturedness. Donald is 21 years old and comes from Petersburg. She is left-handed, but can write with both hands. When she was in the 4th grade, she learned to write with her right hand, which, she says, ruined her penmanship.

Donald has three brothers and one sister and loves to eat and sleep.

It was almost impossible to learn anything from Donald, so I resorted to her roommates. It was told that she likes to eat and sleep better than anything else in the world. She likes poetry and reads it to her suitmates till they have to go down to the library to study.

Donald has the most unusual and striking laugh, and she spends half of her time engaging in this activity. She hates to write letters and, I am told, that she writes very few.

When she told me that she liked swimming, her roommate piped up with, "Yes, she swims like a rock and dives like a frog."

She also likes to row and to take sun-baths. She plays ping pong and shuffleboard a lot.

Her hobby is collecting flowers and going on hikes.

We all know Donald, now, as our next year's House President of Virginia Hall.

Parade Of Opinion

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

- WAR -

In these trying days when history is being recorded by hours rather than by decades, collegians are finding it just as difficult for them as it is for the general public to keep up with the fast pace that the nations are setting in their battle for economic and political allies. The news parade is galloping by so swiftly that the collegians by the side of the road are forming opinions on isolated events only, are seemingly making little effort to co-ordinate their views into any definite policy.

With the exceptions that are always found among the vociferous and thinking youth of a freedom-loving democracy, collegians seem to be forming the following platform as their stand on world events:

1. First, last and always, they do not want the U. S. to participate in any war of aggression or in any war outside the nation's boundaries.
2. They believe that neutrality should be observed so far as men are concerned, but there is a tendency to support economic cooperation with the peace front that is opposing the totalitarian states. But they firmly maintain that this economic cooperation should be on a cash and carry basis only.
3. They believe that a European war is almost inevitable, and they think that the Allied powers of the world war have bungled in allowing Hitler and Mussolini to gain victory after victory. They have little faith in the appeasement policy.

4. The college press is vigorously campaigning for the maintenance of an open mind by all U. S. citizens, and is urging them to beware of all propaganda that is flooding the nation today. Collegians believe that the U. S. can be kept out of any war if the people are kept accurately informed about all developments.

This is, as accurately as can be determined, the state of the college mind today. Tomorrow's events are certain to make it more definite—but just how it will swing no one can predict.

The Federal Unemployment Tax and State Unemployment Insurance Funds do not benefit college fraternities. On November 23, 1938, Massachusetts recognized the inapplicability of the State Unemployment Tax law by exempting Amherst College fraternities.

Mathematics

—E. Donovan.

This is the breath of the old and the new,
Brought together by an age-old study.

The aged and learned teaching you
The young, the healthy, the ruddy
The story of Mathematics.

The old and the new—the aged and the young
Brought together in a quest for knowledge.

It is the story the bards have sung
The aged teaching the young in college
The story of Mathematics.

True Love

At first I believed that they were newlyweds, for their affection for each other was indeed open and challenging. But, day after day passed by; still they remained, the one completely captivated by the other, and then I knew that they couldn't be married, else the novelty would have worn off long before now. Every morning I stepped on the car at the Boulevard to find them there before me. They sat side by side, their faces turned so that each might gaze at the other.

What amazed me most was their ability to sit there enraptured and wholly oblivious to the noise, the jostling, the confusion, the shrieking of the everyday New York subway. I know not where they came from, nor what their destination. Yet, leaving them when I left the car at Forty-Second street, I used often to wonder if ever they managed to disenchant themselves long enough to get off at their own stop. And I was dubious.

Such a fine example of handsome health he was, for his hair was dark and wavy. His face ruddy, clear, and glowing with youth in its smoothness and vitality. Indeed so smooth and fresh was his skin that I was incapable of determining whether he be a man or yet a lad. She didn't quite conceal her admiration either, for every time her eyes met his, I saw the lips of that sweet young thing part as she smiled back at him. How her pearl-like teeth sparkled and reflected her charm.

Not true love you say? Ah, my friend, this time you are wrong. Indeed, I'd ridden in that same subway car every morning for four months and never once failed to find them in their same admirable mood—his beaming face and her shining teeth. And why not, for he was a poster for Lifebuoy Shaving Cream. She was fully as romantic as an ad for Colgate—Colgate toothpaste.

Ode To English

Oh English, English it is so dull
I go to it with my mind in lull
Perhaps its 'cause my tumblers full.

And I'm terribly slack at throwing the bull.

He writes down sentences on the board

And still I sit here very bored
My mind runs at a long dischord
I wonder where my brains are stored.

I sit here, pen in faltering hand
Think I've had all I can stand
'Cause when the mails have spanned the land
I know I'll get a reprimand.

Oh soon I'll be in the family house
To cast off my shadow of school-girl mouse

But then on marks the family grouse
And mother blames it on her spouse.

Oh someday I'll start to study
And give up dreams so ruddy
To a studious mind that's muddy
And come from the ranks of a lazy nobody.
